To whom it may concern,

Xi'an Jiaotong-Liverpool University (XJTLU) is a research-led international university, founded in 2006 jointly by Xi'an Jiaotong University of China and the University of Liverpool of the United Kingdom. To meet the requirement of UK's Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education's (QAA) Quality Code for Higher Education, the language of assessment and instruction at Xi'an Jiaotong-Liverpool University is English throughout undergraduate and postgraduate programmes, and XJTLU module specifications and transcripts are provided in English only. All of the classes are conducted in English, and all assignments must be completed in English. Exemptions may be permitted for some Level 0 (equals to FHEQ Level 3) modules which are offered in Chinese in Stage 1 as required as part of the Chinese undergraduate degree, and language modules may be taught and assessed in relevant languages. Through a combination of classroom participation, and the completion of their assignments, the student has been assessed in a way requiring them to read, write, speak and listen in English.
